The Walla Walla District encompasses the entire Snake River drainage from the headwaters in the Teton Mountains near Jackson Hole, Wyoming, to McNary Dam on the Columbia River in Oregon, approximately 25 miles downstream from the mouth of the Snake River. The majority of the basin lies in southern Idaho. We are a civil works district and operate six major hydroelectric dams with navigation locks on five, providing barge traffic to Lewiston Idaho, 140 miles from the mouth of the Columbia River.

Walla Walla is an historic small town with sunny weather and great outdoor and cultural activities. Excellent hunting, fishing and snow skiing are within an hour's drive and the local ski area has exceptional snow conditions from November to April. The city has a population of 30,000, and hosts Whitman and Walla Walla Colleges as well as the Walla Walla Community College. The colleges bring great theater, music, dance, and other activities to the community. Walla Walla even has its own Symphony, directed by Yaacov Bergman from New York. The Walla Walla Valley has several world class wineries and is rapidly becoming the "Napa Valley" of the Pacific Northwest.

The major annual activities include a large rodeo and frontier days celebration, a hot air balloon festival, summer outdoor musical production, and many other events. The local schools are very good and have a safe, caring atmosphere. Walla Walla has daily airline service to Seattle, and the Tri-Cities (Richland, Pasco, Kennewick) and Pendleton airports are within a 50 minute drive offering service to Portland and Salt Lake City.
